

As the world tackles the health and socioeconomic challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic, Abu Dhabi's Euro Mechanical continues to make progress on projects and diversify its operations

Writer: Tom Wadlow | Project Manager: Ryan Gray

The year 2020 will be remembered as the year the world shut down to contain coronavirus.

No matter where you look, almost every industry has been disrupted in almost all corners of the earth - from tourism and manufacturing to mining and food production, enterprises large and small have been forced to adapt, innovate and dig in in order to survive.

The oil and gas sector has been no different. Current oil demand is around 92-93 million barrels per day, down from 100-101 million - a reduction of around nine percent.

In the UAE, maintenance, construction, control and automation solutions provider Euro Mechanical and its key client ADNOC continue to operate strongly. Yes, some projects have been held up, but both parties are confident in executing their long-term ambitions.

For Euro Mechanical CEO Jon Rawding, the 12 months since we last spoke have been defined by three words - respond, recover, thrive.

"Our organisation and its relationships with people have historically been grounded in trust," he says, "and that means having trust in both the leadership of Euro Mechanical and the government of the UAE and Abu Dhabi - a belief that we have their best interests at heart.

Respond Recover Thrive